Forecast For Northeast England
Issued by Met Office Exeter
at 0400 on Monday 01 Feb 2021

++ Valid for broadcast between 0600 and 1800

Headline:
Mostly dry, bright and cold today. Some disruptive snow Tuesday.

Today:
After a cold and frosty start, it will be mostly dry with bright or sunny spells throughout the day. A few wintry showers are likely, mainly along the east coast. Cloud increasing from the west later in the day. Cold. Maximum temperature 5 deg C (41 deg F).

Tonight:
Rain will move slowly northeastwards overnight. The rain turning to snow on its leading edge, especially over higher ground, but also to low levels, with some significant accumulations possible. Minimum temperature 0 deg C (32 deg F).

Tuesday:
A spell of persistent snow is likely during Tuesday morning, with some significant accumulations possible in places. The snow becoming confined to hills later in the day. Windy and cold. Maximum temperature 2 deg C (36 deg F).

Outlook for Wednesday to Friday:
Rain and hill snow persisting into Wednesday and Thursday, before gradually easing. Staying cold. Perhaps brighter with showers or longer spells of rain on Friday, these turning wintry at times.

(C) Crown Copyright 2021. Published by the Met Office.